

Misery to Mirth

Recovery from Illness in Early Modern England

HANNAH NEWTON

OXFORD
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Contents

List of Figures	xi
List of Abbreviations	xiii
Introduction	1
PART I. MEDICAL UNDERSTANDINGS
1. 'Nature Concocts and Expels': Defeating Disease	33
2. 'She Sleeps Well and Eats an Egg': Restoring Strength	65
PART II. PERSONAL EXPERIENCES
3. 'O, How Sweet is Ease!' Feeling Better	95
4. 'A Double Delight': Thanking God	131
5. 'Pluck't from the Pit': Escaping Death	165
6. 'All is Returned': Resuming Life	193
Conclusion	231
Primary Bibliography	241
Index	253

List of Figures

1. Martha Hatfield, from James Fisher, The wise virgin (1653)	3
2. Philip Henry's first letter after illness, 3 January 1688	23
3. Posset cup, 1650–1700	80
4. Hierarchy of the five senses in the context of pain	100
5. The Bitter Potion (c.1636–8), by Adriaen Brouwer	102
6. Carex mattress from Titchfield, Hampshire (1600s)	105
7. Shaky handwriting of Sarah Cowper during her son's 'shaking fits', 24 November 1715	126
8. Armchair with floral scrollwork, c.1685	199
9. House layouts, with patients' spatial movements during recovery	203