

The US-Mexico Border in American Cold War Film

Romance, Revolution, and Regulation

Stephanie Fuller

palgrave
macmillan

Contents

List of Figures	vii
------------------------	-----

Acknowledgments	ix
------------------------	----

Introduction
Screening the Spaces of the US-Mexico Border	1

Part I Romance

Chapter 1
The Romance of Mexico: Tourists, Fugitives, and Escaping the United States	21

Chapter 2
Mapping Borders and Identity: Representation, Transformation, and Ethnicity	33

Chapter 3
Danger, Disappearance, and the Exotic: American Travelers and Mexican Migrants	51

Part II Revolution

Chapter 4
The Revolutionary Politics of Mexico: Individualism, Communitarianism, and Landscape	67

Chapter 5
Territory, Colonialism, and Gender at the American Frontier	81

Part III Regulation

Chapter 6
Ethnicity, Imperialism, and the Law: Policing Identities at the Border	97
Chapter 7
Border Cities as Contested Space: Postcolonial Resistance in Tijuana	113
Chapter 8
Imperial Journeys and Traveling Shots: Regulation, Power, and Mobility	129
Conclusion
Border Film and Border Studies	147
Appendix A: Indicative List of Cold War Border Films	153
Notes	157
Filmography	191
Bibliography	197
Index	225

Figures

0.1	The closing scenes of Stagecoach see an early and iconic border crossing into Mexico	2
1.1	Where Danger Lives puts its protagonists on the road	28
2.1	Signs and symbols explicitly locate audiences in Mexico in Borderline	37
3.1	The colonizing power of maps in Wetbacks	59
4.1	Juaristas are closely connected with the traditional architecture and Mexican landscape in Vera Cruz	77
5.1	Attempts to control and contain Carmelita Carias in Border River	90
6.1	The US-Mexico border fence highlights the entrapment facing Mexican migrant workers in Border Incident	98
7.1	Cars stream across the border into Mexico in The Tijuana Story	119
8.1	The detritus of American capitalist society suffocates the border town of Touch of Evil	144
C.1	Monsters imagines the US-Mexico border of the future	150